

Boston Whaler 345 Conquest

Seeing is believing.

Boston Whaler has created a hierarchy of vessels that can fill a boater's lifelong needs. With center console, bow rider, cabin cruiser and open style options from 11 to 42 feet, there's no need to leave the Boston Whaler line.

And now there's yet another reason to stay: The Boston Whaler 345 Conquest, the largest model in the Conquest line.

The Boston Whaler fishing pedigree lives true in the 345. A fully bolstered walk-around cockpit makes fish-fighting effortless. Rod holders, tackle/bait storage, pull-out prep surface with hinged cutting board, and electric grill (yes, it's in a drawer!) are standard. A starboard wetbar houses the fridge-freezer, sink with hot/cold faucet and insulated cooler.

For cruising or spending the weekend on the hook, the cabin amenities are sure to please. Forward is the six-person dinette with electric hi-lo table that converts to a queen-size berth, an option known as the Dynamic Cabin System, for which Boston Whaler took home an NMMA Innovation Award. To port is the galley with coffee maker, microwave, hot/cold sink, and 12/120-volt fridge/freezer. Hardwood cabin sole, 26-inch flat screen HDTV, portholes, Fusion stereo system, LED lighting, and wood grain finish increase the comfort and esthetics levels.

Across is the starboard settee that converts to a double berth. There's also a mid-berth under the deck with privacy curtain. An enclosed head boasts pull-out showerhead, VacuFlush toilet (with overboard/dockside pump-out) and skylight.

Boston Whaler didn't compromise on the social value of boating, either. The entire helm deck is covered with a powder-coated integrated hardtop, with three forward tempered windshield panels and open side widow panels with side and aft curtains for climate control.

With the helm to starboard, the 345 Conquest has room to port for an aft-facing seat, table and forward-facing twin bench seat that flips and converts to aft seating while watching the lines. A drop-in filler cushion transforms the area to a full lounge.

"The 345 Conquest provides reliable performance, tremendous fishing capability, ergonomic comfort, and the right complement of features — without hassles or headaches," says Boston Whaler vice president of sales/marketing/customer service Jeff Vaughn. LB
